Ever wonder what running your own practice might be like? What challenges you might face? What unique challenges you may face as a woman in medicine? Questions to ask as you explore the option?

Dr. Becky Lynn is a board certified gynecologist in Saint Louis who knows just what it's like to face these challenges, but also reap the fulfillment of independent practice. Join us as she shares her journey from group practice to academics to independent practice, how she's faced the balance of clinician-leader-founder and advice she has for women in medicine looking to follow a similar path (or just wanting to explore the option).

This session will be suitable to women of every career level and specialty. You're sure to walk away with insight and inspiration for your own career.
